Crystal Traditions is one of the few companies in the United States capable of acid polishing glass and crystal. When crystal is cut, the cut appears to be dull and gray in color. In order to return the sparkle and luster to the crystal, the crystal is acid polished. To do this, crystal is submerged in a combination of acids for a period of time, depending on the quality of the crystal and the intricacy of the cuts. The acid polishes the crystal by removing a layer of crystal and thus returns the piece to its former glory. The piece is then thoroughly washed to remove any acid and inspected for flaws
